Your State Representative

To me, the budget is more than just numbers on a page. It's about people: families, children, teachers, people with disabilities, business owners, nurses, police officers and firefighters, and college students.

Everyone has felt the pain of state budget cuts over the past few years. That's why it is more important than ever to make the most responsible decisions we can during these tough times. And that's why I became the Chair of the House General Government Appropriations & Oversight Committee - to make sure our state government is working for you and improving all the time.

As chair of the committee, I oversee the budgets of 71 different government agencies and helped pass new reforms and innovative redesigns of government services that will save taxpayers hundreds of millions of your tax dollars.

Combining five different agencies into the new Department of Enterprise Services, I worked hard in the 2011 session to streamline government while protecting the workers who deliver the needed services to our state. This consolidation will save taxpayers an estimated $18 million in the short term and potentially hundreds of millions over time.

In 2012, I plan to continue streamlining regulations and providing better transparency. Because every dollar we save means a dollar more for those families struggling to make ends meet, for teachers and students in overcrowded classrooms, and for our law enforcement protecting us with fewer and fewer resources.
