Q6 None of the above. Slashing jobs and fee increases. To fund a portion of basic education (maybe $500 million to $1 billion) impose major cuts to higher education, which might mean raising tuition, lowering enrollment slots for in-state students, along with cutting faculty (which would mean higher class sizes.) Let more people out of prison early and don't monitor them for as long after their release. Cut healthcare for low income families. (They will likely still need services that the state will need to pay for later.) Cut children's services like foster care and food assistance.
