Governor Inslee,

Thank you for your leadership to ensure that Washington's renters have been protected from evictions and homelessness since the beginning of the global COVID-19 pandemic. Your leadership and actions have prioritized the safety of Washington's renters and undoubtedly have saved countless lives. However, the undersigned lawmakers believe that if eviction protections are not extended past the current September 30th end date of your most recent proclamation, Washington will experience the eviction and homelessness crisis that we have been working so hard to avoid.

Recently U.S. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen, Attorney General Merrick Garland and HUD Secretary Marcia Fudge issued a joint letter¹ to Governors and local government leaders across the country urgently requesting your help to prevent unnecessary evictions during the pandemic. Today we are writing in support of their request to extend our eviction moratorium for the remainder of the public health emergency.

Washington state has seen a dramatic increase in individuals experiencing homelessness. It is impacting every community across the state. With hundreds of thousands of renters now at risk for eviction and homelessness we recognize the need to act boldly. We urge you to extend protections that are desperately needed to prevent adding hundreds, or thousands, of individuals and families to our existing homelessness crisis.

You signed into law significant protections for renters that the legislature passed in the last session. We have done much, and yet we know there remains much to do. We will continue to grapple with the enormous challenge ahead of us to recover from the devastating impacts of this pandemic, particularly on the impact it has had on those who are most at risk of homelessness. We look forward to continuing to work in partnership with you in this upcoming legislative session on those challenges. However, we know more must be done right now, and we are urging you to act quickly.

Thank you for all you have done, and all that you are doing, to help ease the suffering of so many who have been impacted.

COVID-19 Impacts on Renters in WA

- According to the latest information available from the Washington State Department of Commerce, Washington ranks as number 15 in the nation in terms of rental assistance distribution through July 2021. However, millions of dollars remain undistributed and many renters will face evictions and homelessness on October 1 while waiting for their applications to be processed. Rental assistance providers across the state are working in earnest to distribute the unprecedented amount of funds appropriated for rental assistance. Over $1 billion in state and federal funds were earmarked for rental assistance and there has never previously been an investment of this magnitude to prevent and end homelessness. The funds met an overwhelmed and understaffed crisis response system that has been moving mountains since the beginning of the pandemic to keep their communities safe. But more time is needed. It would be a tremendous tragedy if evictions opened before rental assistance funds have an opportunity to save homes.
- Washington's BIPOC renters and families with children under 18 are most at risk. Throughout the pandemic, disparities in impact have been consistent. According to the Census Bureau's Pulse Survey, Washington's Latinx and Black renters have consistently faced more housing hardship and risk of eviction and homelessness. This tracks closely to the disparate impact of the pandemic and economic downfall on these same communities. Further, renter households with children under 18 are also disproportionately at risk. If protections are not extended past September 30th, these communities will experience a disparate impact of evictions and homelessness.
 - o 173,589 tenants in Washington State reported being behind on rent. This comprises 11% of all tenants and is up by almost 25,000 from the previous two weeks.
 - o 83,503 of these renters are in the Seattle-Tacoma-Bellevue metro area. This is 48% of the renters who are behind in rent.
 - Significant disparities persist:
 - Hispanic/Latino/Latinx renters = 18% are behind
 - White renters = 9% are behind
 - Black renters = 27% are behind
 - Asian renters = 9% are behind
 - Renters with two or more races = 14% are behind
 - o 22% of renters with children under 18 in the household are behind in rent. In comparison to 8% for renters without children under 18 in the household.
- The numbers speak to a potential new wave of households in need of rental assistance and eviction protections:
 - o 256,239 renters reported being not at all or only slightly confident in their ability to pay September's rent.
 - Over 60,000 renters reported feeling that it was very or somewhat likely that they would be evicted within the next two months.

- o 65,354 tenants who are current on rent reported that they were relying on unemployment to meet their basic needs. All of these renters lost $300 in benefits per week and some of these renters lost unemployment benefits entirely after September 4th (The Seattle Times estimates that 120,000 people in Washington State will be entirely losing benefits) while tens of thousands more have lost the additional $300 week in benefits.
- o 398,861 tenants who are current on rent reported that they were relying on unsustainable means to meet their basic needs including credit cards or loans, money from savings or selling assets, borrowing from friends and family and federal stimulus payments.
